

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

A device for holding a shower element such as a showerhead and the like, has an attaching element attachable to a surface; a holding element turnable to said attaching element; and a device for fixing said holding element relative to said attaching element in any of a plurality of positions, said fixing means including a plurality of projections formed on one of said attaching element and said holding element and at least one counter projection formed on the other of said attaching element and said holding element and engageable with any of said first mentioned projections so as to fix said holding element relative to said attaching element in a corresponding position.